The RICS 2026 Conference explores how Hong Kong can shape a resilient, future-ready built environment through policy insight, strategic development, and technological advancement. Centred on the city's evolving role within the Greater Bay Area, the conference examines the impact of China's 15th Five-Year Plan, the transformative potential of the Northern Metropolis, and the urgent need to address urban ageing and renewal challenges. It also highlights the growing influence of AI and digital innovation in surveying and construction. Bringing together government leaders, industry experts, and technology pioneers, the conference aims to equip professionals to lead Hong Kong's next decade of sustainable growth.

As a premier platform for influential stakeholders from government, industry, and academia, this forum will explore key developments in public-private partnerships, technological innovation, and sustainable finance—critical drivers shaping the future of the built environment. Through insightful discussions and expert-led sessions, participants will gain valuable perspectives on emerging market trends, policy directions, and investment strategies that will define Hong Kong's competitiveness on the global stage.

Attendees will engage in thought-provoking exchanges to craft a strategic blueprint for a more adaptive and internationally integrated city. By fostering collaboration and knowledge sharing, this conference will empower professionals to lead the next wave of transformation, ensuring a future-ready property market that meets the evolving demands of businesses, investors, and communities.

Join us to be part of this essential dialogue—where expertise meets vision, innovation drives progress, and new pathways emerge for Hong Kong's built environment.
