Event Description:

The first presentation will focus on the latest developments in the intellectual property and business valuation landscape, with particular reference to the new government measures highlighted in the recent policy address

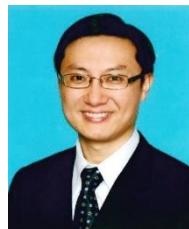

The second presentation will present on how specialised IP valuation links intangible assets to capital markets. It will examine income approach methods, including the Relief-from-Royalty method and the Multi-Period Excess Earnings Method, and highlight the challenges of isolating IP-driven cash flows and determining appropriate discount rates for startups. The discussion will be illustrated using PRC lending models, with insights drawn from Mainland China's established IP pledge frameworks.
